Safe Essential Oils for Dogs

Buying Essential Oils for Dogs

If you are new to aromatherapy, you may not know where and how to find pure, therapeutic grade essential oils for dogs. There are indeed a lot of places where we can buy essential oils, and you may even notice quite a big difference in price for the same oil at different stores.

The following guidelines will show you how and where to get high-quality essential oils for your dog:

- Look for essential oils that are bottled in amber, cobalt or violet glass bottles.
- Look for important information of the oils (either printed on the label, and/or on the store's website, brochure, etc.):
 - Scientific name of the oil (e.g. Lavandula angustifolia);
 - * Common name of the oil (e.g. Lavender);
 - * How the oil was extracted;
 - * Country of origin;
 - * Method of cultivation (e.g. organic, cultivated, wild harvested, etc.)
 - * The words "100% pure essential oil".
- Essential oils are generally expensive, so don't go for unreasonably cheap oils since cheap oils are likely to be adulterated.
- Avoid buying essential oils at supermarkets or health food stores (they may be cheaper but usually of a lower quality).
